Hardwood Floor Refinishing Frequently Asked Questions

HARDWOOD FLOOR INSTALLATION

Do I have to leave my house during the refinishing process?

It depends on the size of the project. If refinishing hardwood floors is taking place in the majority of your living space, you may need to stay elsewhere until the project is complete. For one or two rooms, you may be able to occupy the other parts of your home while the restoration is completed.

How long does refinishing take?

It depends on the size of the room or rooms. The average time for a hardwood flooring installation is three to seven days. In your consultation, you will receive a more concise estimate for the length of your project.

How long do I have to wait to use my room after new finish is applied?

We recommend waiting 4-6 hours before walking on your new floors in socks. After 24 hours you can walk through with shoes on. Allow 48 hours before setting furniture and returning pets. Carpets and area rugs can be placed after 2 full weeks. We do provide options where the finish will cure much faster, in some cases 48 hours.

How long will my floors last?

With proper care, hardwood floors may never have to be replaced.

Can you remove water damage from my hardwood floors?

Yes. Water damaged floors may need repair or replacement, depending on the amount of water and the length of time they have spent wet.

Just a few of my boards are damaged. Can you replace just those boards?

Of course. Depending on the damage and how many boards are affected, we will evaluate your floors and provide you an estimate for repairs.

Do I need to remove my baseboards before you sand and stain my hardwood floors?

The short answer is no. Keep in mind that painted baseboards may need a paint touch up after staining.

How long will my new finish last?

On average, a hardwood flooring finish lasts approximately ten years. We recommend a yearly evaluation yearly. A maintenance coat may need to be applied, but with proper care and maintenance, it can last much longer.
